If you thought Lancaster had a young population, just wait until you visit State College, where 80.04 percent of residents are between the ages of 18 and 34—a number that would just be insane, if this place weren't home to Penn State.

Aside from the schools, though, State College has a lot going on, even for that handful of people who aren't students (probably faculty). It is easily one of the most densely populated places in the state, so you're always bound to run into somebody, and for the number of residents, this place is simply littered with nightlife and music venues.
